

The Present World is so Small as Every Nation Depends on Each Other: The Wave of Covid-19

Asem Surindro Singh*

Department of Neurology and Rehabilitation Medicine, University of Cincinnati, USA

Corresponding Author: Asem Surindro Singh, Department of Neurology and Rehabilitation Medicine, University of Cincinnati, USA.

Received: December 27, 2021; Published: December 29, 2021

Everyone has eye witnessed once again that every nation in the world is closely connected to each other. Be in business, be in research, be in education, be in farming, be in cultivating, and many more to be mentioned; in several aspects of human life as everyone wants to live and experience in what has been developed in the past, present world and things that is going to come in the future, everyone needs each other. As all wish to experience good things and comforts in life, there is no reason to be proud and there is no reason to be high minded; but there is perfect reason to be humble and love one another, acknowledge and be thankful to each other, for the mutual help that each one receives from one another.

It is not the first time that such a contagious pandemic or pandemic disease like covid-19 spread across the world and claimed millions of lives to death. More severe cases had happened in the past and covid-19 pandemic is not over yet. The historical records evidenced that, time to time, millions of deaths had occurred due to such type of pandemic disease. In fact, in 6th century (541 - 549) the deaths caused by the first outbreak of bubonic plague were estimated to be between 25 to 100 millions, which is approximately equivalent to 40 to 100% of Europe's population at that time. In the 2nd outbreak (1346 to 1353), bubonic plague claimed 75 to 200 millions of people's lives to death. Again, in its 3rd outbreak during 1955 to 1960, the number of deaths reported only from India and China reached more the 12 millions. The pandemic of HIV/AIDS since 1981 had also claimed more than 32 millions of people's lives to death, until now. There are many more pandemic diseases that had caused millions of fatality in the past. The present Covid-19 pandemic that began in December 2019 spread fast across all the countries in the world (except 2/3 countries that have not reported) and had affected more than 279 millions of people across the world and lead to fatality of more than 5 millions of people. Thanks to the development of the medical sciences, healthcare system, scientific research teams, government policies, public awareness, more than 249 millions have recovered from this deadly disease.

Covid-19 pandemic has severely affected the normal life of everyone in the world due to restriction in public gathering, travels, shutting down of educational institutions and marketplaces etc. What do we learn? The spread of covid-19 could not be stopped and these restrictions can only be operated temporarily from time to time. How long can any country remain disconnected from the rest of the world? Can a country stand-alone forever by being the richest or most developed country in the world? Every country has mixture of populations due to education, research and business purposes etc. and for a country to become rich it has to have strong connections with other countries for its business to be successful and a mutual benefit has to be established. One provides service and the other pays for it and vice versa. There is no reason to be proud, but to be humble and love and keep respect and regards for each other, understanding the need for mutual help to each other and thereby closing the distance gaps. Each individual person is a part of a nation and therefore deserves respect for his/her contribution to the nation and to the world in one way or the other disregarding of family lines, conditions or birthplace. Covid-19 has no biasness to any nation or country, not to different skin types/colors, neither to poor nor to rich. The sickness and the death are same to everyone. A garden is decorated with different types of flowers and colors and aroma and thus justified the beauty and appreciated and acknowledged. "Should one feel inferior on the other side; not at all". We can learn from the garden and find good reasons and be reasonable and be corrected into our thoughts and conducts.

Volume 5 Issue 1 January 2022

©All rights reserved by Asem Surindro Singh.